Germany's energy regulator - the Federal Network Agency - is scrutinising allegations of insider trading in the country's power market first reported by Montel in June. The allegations relate to a confidential signal grid operators provide to select companies to keep power networks in balance.

Austria is heavily reliant on Russian gas, with around 80% of its imports still coming from Gazprom. But this supply route could be cut off at the end of December, as Ukraine is unlikely to renew the transit deal that allows Russian gas to flow into Austria.

Artificial Intelligence's need for computing power will require the scaling up of data centres over the next decade. Europe's data centre market is heading for a fivefold boom by 2032 and tech giants are seeking out virgin territories with sufficient space to build their new complexes. Reporting by Alina Trabattoni, Italy Correspondent, Montel.
